So the next time you grab a sucker from the store, no need to waste The Tootsie Pop Kid time trying to spot the famous image. Ever since Tootsie Pop was created inthere has been widespread myth that wrappers which depicted a star shooting from the bow and arrow of a Native American man could get you a free Tootsie Pop.

IntheownerofDan'sShortstoptoldareporterthatwhenhefirstopenedchild Was I the only one told as a child that if I had enough tootsie roll wrappers with the Indian shooting the star on it I would get a prize? Where the notion came The Tootsie Pop Kid is a mystery, although it may have originated or been kept alive when local stores began to give away free Tootsie Pops whenever anyone produced one of these wrappers.
