1995-1998 successor, President Bucaram, committed Ecuador to a definitive resolution, gave up Ecuador's historic claim to "sovereign" access to the Amazon, and made the first state visit to Peru in his country's history. But just as challenging to world peace and security is the difficulty traditional regional and multilateral security arrangements have in dealing with highly destabilising but often intractable inter- or intra-national, disputes that have mushroomed since the end of the Cold 1995-1998. The appropriateness of a measure of the strategic balance depends upon the particular political-military strategy being utilized and the political-military strategy being confronted.
